Give them some food yourselves. (Matthew 14:16)

Tony Melendez was born without any arms. But he was also born with a gift for music, so he developed a unique way to share that gift. He played with his feet, starting with a push-button organ and moving to the guitar and harmonica. Combining his musical gifts with his faith, Melendez became involved in music ministry. In 1987, he played before Pope John Paul II, who leaped out of his seat, embraced the young man, and said, "My wish for you is to continue giving this hope to all the people." Melendez is still doing that through his ministry, giving concerts and motivational talks, supporting people with disabilities, and helping young-adult and missionary programs.

Tony Melendez is a perfect illustration of the principle we see at work in today's reading. The disciples didn't have that much going for them. Five loaves and two fish couldn't possibly feed such a huge crowd! But they brought their meager portion to Jesus, who blessed it and gave it back to them. Notice: he didn't distribute the meal himself. He told the disciples to do it. Not sure what to expect, they handed out the bread and fish—and the impossible became possible!

By telling the disciples to feed the crowd themselves, Jesus made it clear that the miracle would not happen without them.

What do you have to offer today? Don't worry if it seems paltry. Offer it to the Lord anyway. Give him your work, play, or study. Give him the difficult situation that you're dealing with. Give him your imagination or your anxieties. Ask him to bless it, transform it, and use it for his Father's glory. Then, like Tony Melendez, work with whatever you have. As you do, you'll find God's power multiplying your offering, "feeding" the people around you.

"Lord, I give you my heart. Thank you for accepting me as I am. I trust that you will let none of my gifts go to waste!"
